International Health Promoting Campuses Symposium

May 14, 2022 | 9:00 am – 4:00 pm

Montréal, Canada

Format: Virtual participation (in-person/hybrid options still to be confirmed)

Building on the success of the 2019 event in Rotorua, New Zealand, the International Health Promoting Campuses Symposium will be a one-day pre-event before the 2022 UHPE World Conference on Health Promotion taking place May 15-19 in Montreal, Canada (<https://iuhpe2022.com>).

This one-day event aims to activate the Okanagan Charter on higher education campuses around the world. The Okanagan Charter was an outcome of the 2015 International Conference on Health Promoting Universities and Colleges; calling on Higher Education settings to embed health into all aspects of campus culture and lead health promotion action and collaboration locally and globally.

Audience

The Symposium will be relevant for academics, management, students, educators, student support service providers, researchers, and all those interested in the advancement of health promotion, public health, wellbeing, equity, and sustainability within Universities, Colleges, and Polytechnics settings.

Goals

- Share knowledge on how to apply the Okanagan Charter locally with a cultural, Indigenous rights, and social justice lens
- Listen to an international panel of experts to illustrate activation of the Okanagan Charter in a diverse range of campus settings and national networks
- Workshop strategic implementation of a health promotion process in higher education
- Build collective engagement and participate in the global health-promoting universities and colleges movement to implement the Okanagan Charter
- Strengthen student voice and engagement
